Signs of a Termite Infestation

Flying Termites - Alates

Usually the first sign of a termite infestation is the presence of flying termites called swarmers or alates. Flying termites lose their wings shortly after finding a mate.

ALATES

Knocking Sounds

Soldier termites bang their heads against the wood or shake their bodies when the colony is disturbed to signal danger to the other termites.

TERMITE

Did you know?

Termites are rarely noticed unless their nest is disturbed.

Termites do not have eyes.

Subterranean termites prefer to live underground in soil.

If you locate termites it is very important to not disturb them.

Professional Pest Inspection

Our thermal imaging equipment use infrared technology for detecting moisture and temperature variances.

Our moisture meters provide a moisture reading of building materials so that our inspector can determine if there are conditions which might lead to termite activity.

Most insurance policies do not cover termite damage.
